RARE COLLECTION OF AGATES

Rhinelander Man Gathers Valuable Stones
On the Isle of Royal

While on a recent trip to the Isle of Royal in Lake Superior, Chas. Shepard, the well known traveling salesman of this city, collected a quantity of rare stones and agates valued at several hundred dollars. These stones can only be found at certain times of the year at spots along the shores of the Island where they have been washed in by the tide. Numbered among the collection are a few green stones, a very rare variety, which command nearly as high a price as the diamond.

A Chicago man, who made the trip to the Island with Mr. Shepard, made a small collection of agates, which, upon his return to the city he sold for $1000. A company would have been formed long ago to make a business of gathering these stones but they cannot be found in large enough quantities.

It is the intention of Mr. Shepard to go on another trip to the Isle of Royal next June and he expects to induce a number of Rhinelander people to accompany him.

JUDGE REID WILL ORDER GRAND JURY

Drawing May Take Place on First Day of May Term of Oneida County Court

The New North learns from good authority that Judge A. H. Reid of this circuit will probably order the drawing of a grand jury for Oneida county on the first day of the coming May term of circuit court.

Some weeks ago it was reported that certain residents of the town of Minocqua had filed with the county clerk a petition asking that a grand jury be called for the purpose of investigating affairs in that town. Judge Reid's intention to draw the jury is no doubt in compliance with this petition. This will be Oneida county's first grand jury.

HOW JURY IS DRAWN

There are but few people in this county familiar with the ceremony attending the drawing of a grand jury. The law provides that the jury shall be drawn from a list prepared by the county jury commissioners. A little girl, under ten years of age, named by the presiding judge, will do the drawing. The child will remove the names written on slips from the bottom of a hat in the presence of the judge and jury commissioners.

BANQUET BASKET BALL PLAYERS

High School Girls Do Honor to the Boys' Squad

The girls' Athletic Association of the Rhinelander High school gave a fine course banquet in the club room of the Congregational church, Saturday evening, in honor of the boys' basket ball squad. Covers were laid for fifty-five.

The dining hall was prettily trimmed with yards of green ribbon placed about the walls and hung in dainty festoons from the ceiling. During the banquet many brilliant toasts were given and responded to by both the girls and boys. Miss Edna Gleason acted very efficiently in the difficult role of toast mistress. Included among those present were the members of the High school faculty. The affair was one of the season's pleasant social features and the young people thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

PLANNING MILL DESTROYED

Pelican Lumber Company Had $12,000 Fire Loss This Morning.

Fire at an early hour this morning destroyed the planing mill plant of the Pelican River Lumber company located one mile and a half south of this city.

The blaze was discovered at about two o'clock and in less than one hour the mill was in ashes. The cause of the fire is unknown but it is believed to have originated in the rear end of the mill.

The loss is placed at $12,000, partly covered by insurance. When seen today, Mr. Hardell, who is at the head of the Pelican River Lumber company, was unable to state as to whether or not the mill would be rebuilt.

Two box cars on the Northwestern side track near the mill were also burned.

Frank Broelette of Minneapolis was in the city Tuesday.

ADDRESS ON BOOZE AND BANKRUPTCY IS DELIVERED TO LARGE AUDIENCE

REV. GRANT CLARK GIVES A FAIR AND CANDID CONSIDERATION OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Pastor Does Not Resort to Exaggeration or Abuse But Presents a Clean and Truthful Argument In Favor of the Prohibition Movement

At the Congregational church, Sunday evening, Rev. Grant Clark, the pastor delivered before an audience that completely taxed the seating capacity of the big edifice, his sermon, "Booze And Bankruptcy." It had been well advertised that Rev. Clark was to talk on this subject and people in all walks and vocations gathered to hear him. Throughout the discourse he was fair and candid and at no time did he resort to exaggeration or abuse. Many claim that it was the cleanest and most thorough argument in favor of prohibition ever presented before the Rhinelander public. The New North gives its readers the following extracts from the sermon.

"I believe that if the American people were to be made acquainted with the facts concerning the liquor traffic they would forthwith vote the modern saloon out of existence. It is not necessary to deceive them by any tricks or false representations. I think the majority of the American people want to be fair, that in the long run they will be in favor of those things which promote the highest welfare of the majority. And it is in this belief that I find hope for the cause of temperance.

To acquaint people with the facts is all I expect to do. I do not wish to force my own convictions upon you. I expect you to work out convictions for yourselves. I have faith that when the facts which have been brought to my notice shall be brought to your notice you will form convictions which, in the main, shall coincide with mine.

I should not be true to the ideals of my profession were I to draw unwarranted conclusions from statistics or neglect any of the facts relating to the problem before us. A physician is not likely to be successful in treating a case of sickness unless he has made a correct diagnosis of the disease, and prescribed in accordance with established therapeutic facts.

There is a great deal of trouble in American life today. Those who would help alleviate this trouble must first diagnose. But a correct diagnosis is based upon facts. And no man is worthy to take part in a reform who does not have the highest regard for the facts disclosed. My prejudices against the liquor traffic do not constitute a proper motive for me to oppose the evil. Therefore in the present campaign against the saloon as an institution I have tried to push aside my prejudices and consider with open mind and unprejudiced judgment the facts which have been brought to my notice.

Let it be first understood that I do not propose, at this time, to discuss the question as to whether it is wrong to use, as a beverage, fermented liquors. It would be well for each of us to permit some reputable physician to settle that problem for us. His judgement of the question would be expert, and if consulted on the matter, he would doubtless be honest in expressing his candid opinion.

The question which I beg to discuss is, should the modern saloon be permitted by law to exist in the U. S. and particularly in the city of Rhinelander? As there are several phases of this question I prefer to give especial attention to the economic phase.

Last Sunday I called your attention to the fact that it is variously estimated that from $200,000 to $300,000 pass over the bars of the city of Rhinelander each year. And that out of this vast amount in the neighborhood of $17,000 is paid into the city treasury. I raised the question as to whether it is good economy for the people of Rhinelander to send out of the city from $10 to $20 in order to have one dollar paid into the treasury in the form of taxes.

I also made the statement, and I think that none will dispute it, that if the people of this city do not spend money for intoxicating liquors they are certain to spend it in some other way, or place it in the banks on deposit; that if one of our citizens does not spend his money for intoxicants he will certainly spend it for groceries, dry goods, meat, hardware, furniture, or perhaps invest in real estate; that when he spends ten dollars for liquor he has nothing to show for it, that is, nothing that he cares to mention, but when he spends it in furniture, he has the furniture in his house, or for groceries and provisions he has the provisions in his larder, or for real estate he becomes the owner of the house in which he lives. In very many cases it resolves itself down to this. Shall a man drink whiskey, or shall he have a home of his own well supplied with furniture?

But in spite of these strong arguments there are many able business men in our own state who will insist that to drive out the saloons from a city will "kill the town." But this is only a prophecy, and must not be considered as a statement of fact. How are we to settle the question? The fairest way of which I know is to permit the "logic of events" to speak to us on this point. I wish to take the city of Kansas City, Kansas, for our study. I take this city because it seems to have presented all the conditions necessary for a proper consideration of the matter. And because the liquor traffic is completely abolished in that city.

For twenty years the state of Kansas has had a prohibition law on its statute books, but no successful effort was made to enforce it until June, 1906. For the following statement of facts I cite as authority Hon. C. W. Trickett, Assistant State Attorney, of Kansas City, Kansas. Kansas City has a population of 100,000, with a larger percentage of foreigners than any other manufacturing city in the nation, and as a manufacturing city ranks fifth in the manufacturing cities of this country; it also has a larger slum district in proportion to its population than any other city of the nation. It is situated in Wyandotte county. On June 8th, 1906 Wyandotte county contained 25 saloons running wide open, 200 gambling houses, and more than 50 houses of social evil. On July 3rd, less than one month later, there was not a saloon, gambling den, or disorderly house in the whole county. All this was accomplished in less than one month in spite of the fact that not an official in the whole city or in the entire county was in favor of prohibition. A strong committee of able business men called on the State attorney and begged of him not to enforce the prohibition law, stating that it would completely destroy the business and kill the city. The attorney's reply to them was as follows: "Gentlemen, I did not enact the law; but I have taken an oath of office that I will enforce the law, and so long as that law remains on the statute books of the State of Kansas, and so long as I have a registered oath I will do the best I can to enforce it, even if it makes a Salazar desert of Wyandotte county, and turns corner lots back into field and forest." And he did enforce the law. What was the result? On June 22nd, 1907, after they had tried prohibition for one year, the largest bank in the city reports an increase in deposits of $1,700,000. Letters from practically every bank in that city report a proportionate increase in deposits. The savings bank reports an increase in deposits of 50%, and adds that 75% of the new customers were from the class who were formerly heavy drinkers. All classes of merchants report a similar increase in business. Population increased astonishingly, and the percent of building operations far surpassed that of any other city in the nation. The large majority of business men who were formerly opposed to prohibition have been completely won over and are to-day among its staunchest advocates. In other words in 1907 the people of Kansas City did not want prohibition. After testing it for one year they were so completely convinced of the economic disadvantages of the saloons that they would not permit them to return. To me the experience in Kansas City speaks eloquently in favor of voting out the liquor traffic from Rhinelander. I prefer to act in accordance with the facts established beyond doubt by the experience of that city, than to depend upon the mere prophecy of men without the authority of experience.

But they tell us that men look upon their drinks as a sort of luxury to which they have a right. I do not agree with that. I claim that no man has a right to enjoy a "luxury" which robs his wife and children of necessities. A man is no man at all who is willing to hang around a saloon till ten, eleven and twelve o'clock at night enjoying his "luxuries" while a faithful wife with anxious look and heavy heart is spending the sleepless hours at home. Gentlemen, I wish to indulge in no luxury which I cannot enjoy in the sacred precincts of the home circle, honored by the company of my wife and child.

In imagination I see the troubled faces of hundreds of anxious wives and mothers of our city turned to me in mute appeal, calling upon me to use my voice and the influence of my position in an effort to remove the causes which are banishing love from their homes and weighing the soul down with bitter anguish. If chivalry is not dead within our breasts we are bound to heed these appeals and act like men of courage."

ATTEMPT TO BURN WAY TO LIBERTY

Trio Held for Robbery Take Dangerous Method in Effort to Escape From Minocqua Jail

Three men who claim to be James Asgard of Saginaw, Mich., Harry Wendel of Wichita, Kas., and John Morrison of Chicago are held at the Oneida county jail charged with the robbery of the home of John Brace, a farmer in the town of Cassian.

It is alleged that the trio secured jewelry valued at seventy-five dollars. They were arrested at Minocqua last Thursday and appearing before Judge Ames in second municipal court were bound over for trial at the spring term of circuit court.

ATTEMPT TO BURN JAIL
While in the jail at Minocqua awaiting their transfer to this city the men made a daring attempt to gain their freedom by burning off the lock on the main door of the building. They nearly succeeded in destroying the entire jail and such would have been the case had the fire not been discovered in time to prevent it from gaining much headway.

The men had been placed in separate cells but during the late hours of the night managed to break out of their narrow quarters. The finding of a can of kerosene in the jail inspired the prisoners with the idea to escape by burning their way out. The wood work around the lock on the entrance door was saturated with the oil and touching a match to this the flame was soon shooting upward toward the ceiling. A man passing the jail seen the reflection in the building and lost no time in calling out the department. The fire was extinguished before it had resulted in any serious amount of damage.

In conceiving this desperate method of endeavoring to make their escape the men could have had no regard for their own personal safety. They are looked upon by the officers as old time offenders who are thoroughly familiar with life behind prison bars.

FALLING LIMB CAUSES DEATH

George Gumiuk Victim of Accident in Woods Near Bandy.

While at work in the timber, last Thursday afternoon, Geo. Gumiuk, a woodsman employed at Schellenger's camp near Bandy received injuries which terminated in his death at St. Mary's hospital, Friday morning. He was engaged in cutting a tree. In falling, the tree struck another one near by and in bounding back a limb dropped and hit Gumiuk on the head, crushing his skull.

He was removed at once to the hospital in this city where he died without regaining consciousness. The unfortunate man was twenty-eight years of age and as far as is known has no relatives in this part of the country. He had sufficient wages due him at the camp to bear his funeral expenses.

SHAKE THEM IN
BOTTLE TO MIX

Readers Should Try This for Kidney or Bladder Trouble

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Karrow, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. A local druggist is the authority that these simple, harmles ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from our home druggist.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive Kidneys, overcoming Backache, Bladder weakness and Urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man or woman here who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

HICKS APRIL PROPHECY

Sleet Storms and Blizzards May be Expected This Month.

Rev. Ira P. Hicks forecasts April weather as to be somewhat stormy.

A regular storm period is central on the second reaching from March 31st.
to April 5th. Storm and weather conditions will reach a serious crisis from the 1st. to the 6th, inclusive, culminating on and touching the 4th.
and 5th.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 7th. and 8th.
People in the northern sections should expect destructive sleet storms and even blizzards, at either of the first three storm periods in April.

A regular storm period covers the 11th to the 16th. If snow, sleet and general cold have predominated, this period will bring unseasonable heavy snow, sleet and cold.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 18th, 19th and 20th. The disturbances of this period will be characterized mainly by the same kind of phenomena. On and touching the 18 and 19 sudden high temperature, with very threatening barometer. Frosts and much cooler will follow this period.

A regular storm is central on the 23rd, covering the 23rd to 29th. High barometer west winds and possible snow equals to the northward need not be a surprise.

The Wisconsin congressmen are practically a unit against the Payne bill in its present form.

The Marsh county option bill was killed in the senate yesterday by a vote 17 to 12. The senators gave warning that the question will be fought out again in the next legislature. All over the country the tendency is to go on the water wagon.

ELECTION DAY

Next Tuesday is election and still there is no activity among politicians. There are two general tickets, the judicial and the superintendents'. The three candidates on the judicial ticket are John Barnes for judge on the supreme bench, A. H. Reid for circuit judge and Leti J. Billings for county judge. All three candidates are serving in their respective offices and are serving so well that they are running for re-election without opposition.

The other ticket, the superintendents' ticket has four candidates for state superintendent, C. P. Cary for re-election for his third term; W. C. Hewett of Oshkosh normal; J. T. Hooper, supt. of schools at Ashland and L. W. Wood, former rural school inspector, are also candidates. Mr. Wood's former work as rural school inspector especially fits him to uplift and advance the country schools and there is no class of schools that needs especial attention to the same extent that they do; that is one of the chief reasons why we are supporting him for the office. All voters outside the city also cast their ballot for county superintendent.

Women are entitled to vote for both state and county superintendents and separate ballot boxes will be provided for them at all voting precincts.

There are few contests in the city but whenever there are two or more candidates for the same office, the voter should cast his ballot for the man whom he believes would serve the city best.

There is a separate ballot to vote as to whether the city shall have license or no license after July first.

This is an important question and every man should cast his vote according to his honest convictions. We have little idea as to the result of this contest.

MADISON LETTER

The legislative investigation took a different direction last Friday when the senate adopted the Owen resolution to continue the investigation of Senator Stephenson's campaign without the assistance or interference of the assembly and to make the probe include the final election which terminated on March 4th. There was a spirited debate over this resolution: Senators Hudnall and Brazeau opposed it and Owen, Marsh and Gaylord supported it. It was adopted by a vote of 19 to 9.

This is the result of the methods employed by the assembly members of the joint investigating committee. They are accused of doing everything possible to prevent the committee from getting the facts. Last week, while in the midst of important developments, they suddenly cut off all further investigation of Stephenson supporters and called Hatten witnesses. They acted as if they were afraid of something. Saturday, the day following the adoption of the Owen resolution, they made a compromise proposition to the senate members: They admitted they were through with Hatten and suggested the senate members might proceed as they wish. Their object in offering this concession is obvious but it is doubtful whether the senate members will humor them. The investigation has been ordered and it is ought to be thorough in every respect. A little more time will unfold a wonderful tale.

The bill providing for the rotation of names on the primary ballots passed the assembly and will doubtless become a law. This will eliminate the advantage of candidates whose names begin with the first letters of the alphabet. The bill providing for county option on saloon licenses was bitterly contested in committee but it is reported it will pass the senate. What the assembly will do cannot be definitely stated. The anti-saloon sentiment is clearly gaining ground. The senate is composed of a large number of exceptionally strong members. It is said to be one of the best ever elected in the state. It is impossible to do them all justice in one letter, but I will refer to one or two more now and to others later.

Lieutenant Governor John Strange, the presiding officer, hails from Oshkosh; he has been in the public eye for some time and was a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1896. He is a gentleman in every sense of the word, knows how to meet people and make them feel comfortable in his presence. He has strong convictions and expresses them fearlessly. He is uncompromisingly opposed to machine politics and lives up to his ideal. He was elected to his office on a big vote in a surprisingly short and inexpensive campaign which completely refutes the arguments that the primary election is necessarily expensive for the candidate. His opponent spent a good round sum—and lost.

Senator Gaspard, socialist, one of the new members, is making a remarkable record. He is a worker and a good one; a recognized power in the senate; popular with all classes on account of his obvious sincerity. You will hear more about him later.

If you are thinking of running for office because you think it is a bed of roses, read the following letter and change your mind:

MICROBES IN THE SCALP

The Latest Explanation is That Microbes Cause Baldness

Professor Unna of Hamburg Germany, and Dr. Sabouraud of Paris, France, share the honor of having found the hair microbe.

Baldness is not caused through a few weeks' work of these hair microbes, but is the result of conditions brought about by their presence.

Baldness may not occur until years after the microbes begin to work, but it is certain to come sooner or later.

The microbes cut off the blood supply. They feed on the fatty matter about the root of the hair, through which the blood is absorbed. Finally the fatty matter is wholly consumed, the food supply of the hair is gone and it starves and finally dies.

Resorcin is one of the most effective germ destroyers; Beta Naphtol is both germicidal and antiseptic; Pilocarpin, though not a dye, restores natural color to hair when loss of color was caused by disease. These curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant, perfect a remedy unequalled for curing scalp and hair troubles.

We want everyone who has any scalp or hair trouble to try Rexall "33" Hair Tonic, which contains all these ingredients. If it does not grow hair on your bald head; stop your hair from falling out; cure you of dandruff; make your hair thick, silky, luxuriant; if it does not give you complete satisfaction in every particular, return the empty bottle to us, and we shall return every penny you paid us for it without question or formality.

Of course, you understand that when we say that Rexall "33" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, we do not refer to cases where the roots are entirely dead, the pores of the scalp closed, and the head has the shiny appearance of a billiard ball. In cases like this there is no hope. In all other cases of baldness Rexall "33" Hair Tonic will positively grow hair, or cost the user nothing.—J. J. Steardon, Rhinelander, Wis.

BORAX SHOW DREW CROWDS

The free moving picture shows given by the Pacific Coast Borax Co., at the Armory, Friday and Saturday, attracted large crowds. This is a new and novel method of advertising, entirely original with the above company, and is proving successful in increasing the sales of its products. The pictures shown are those of the vast borax deposits in the famous Death Valley of Nevada and scenes along the company's railroad leading to the mines. This line was recently completed at a cost of over $3,000,000. B. H. Barton, manager of the show, gave interesting lectures in connection with the pictures.

THE ADOPTED BOY

(Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.) You might have buried Miss County over and you could not have found a more even tempered couple than Deacon Tanner and his wife. They had come to be fifty years old and were childless.

The Rev. Mr. Peters had succeeded the person who had had charge of the church at Ramfield to which the deacon and his wife belonged.

One day a calamity happened in the village. A gale blew down a barn in which a resident and wife had taken refuge, and they were killed, while a year-old baby in the mother's arms was miraculously spared. The victims had friends, but no relatives that could be heard of. Several good women came forward to take care of the little orphan, but Mr. Peters had his plans in regard to that matter. He didn't think it right for the child to be shifted from one to the other, but felt it must be provided with a permanent home and grow up in gratitude and goodness. He therefore called upon Deacon Tanner and his wife and suggested and argued and insisted that they legally adopt the little stranger. A great deal was said about hearth, home and the prattle of innocence; also about a staff to lean on in their declining years. In their goodness and innocence the couple agreed with him, and the necessary legal steps were taken and the kid turned over to them, and everybody was happy, particularly those who had got it off their hands after weeks of affliction. On the next Sunday most of the sermon was devoted to this tender incident, and the deacon went home feeling good. His wife had remained home to take care of the adopted, who had developed a beautiful case of rash that morning.

Only about a week had passed since the adoption when the neighbors began to whisper that they could see a change in Deacon Tanner and his wife. They were losing their smiles. There was something wrong somewhere, and when it was hinted to the minister he called in hopes to solve the problem. He wasn't kept waiting very long. With tears in her eyes Mrs. Tanner said:

"The deacon has called me a fool."

"You can't mean it?"

"But I do. He has called me a fool a dozen times over."

"But why?"

"Because of the baby. The little thing hadn't had the colic over five nights running and kept us up most of each night when the deacon said I was a fool for wanting to adopt it, and he's keeping it up."

"It seems incredible. I will go out into the garden and speak to him about it."

Out he went and demanded an explanation and got it.

"But she has called me an old idiot," said the deacon in defense.

"Impossible! Why should she?"

"On account of that young 'un. Whenever he howls she says I was an old idiot to saddle us with him."

The good man administered soothing syrup to man and wife in liberal quantity, and when he took his departure they had almost forgiven each other. Nevertheless the end of another week saw more trouble. While standing at his back door in the afternoon the deacon was overheard to say to his wife in the kitchen:

"You think he's coming down with the measles now, do you, and that it will be four weeks before he is over it? Well, I want to say that if he comes down I'm going to leave this house. If you'd had the brains of a chickadee you'd never have got such a nuisance here."

And later on a neighbor could have sworn to the fact that she saw the deacon's wife out under the pear tree, with her apron to her face, and overheard her exclaim to herself:

"I can't stand it to live with an idiot and a howling baby much longer! I'm getting to be a desperate woman."

Neither the deacon nor his wife appeared at church next day, and toward evening the minister called. He found the baby howling, the adopted mother crying and the deacon hiding away up in the garret.

"What do you think?" wailed the wife as she tried to clear her eyes of the tears. "neither one of us got a wink of sleep last night, and the deacon called baby a hyena and me a mutton headed scarecrow?"

"It can't be!"

"And what did she call me?" added the deacon as he came down from his roost. "I told her that the baby had mumps instead of measles, and she said I didn't know enough to feed hogs and that she wished she had never set eyes on me!"

"But this can't go on," protested the shocked minister.

"No; I'll leave him tomorrow," exclaimed the wife.

"I'll leave her first!" added the deacon.

After an hour the good man went away. He talked his best and then left the matter in the hands of Providence. Providence took hold of things and, knowing far more than a minister about the results of introducing a

WASHINGTON NEWS

Having about the same regard for the interests of the consumer and possessing no more information in regard to the difference in the cost of production in this country and in competing foreign countries, without being able to hazard a guess as to the revenue producing power of the new tariff bill Congress is slouching around in the wilderness of schedules.

Without definite information from any authoritative source as to the conditions surrounding any particular branch of industry and the need of protection or the ability of that industry to get along without protection, Congress is certainly the most pitiable object that there is on exhibition in Washington. It is wafted hither and thither by every trade wind that hits the town. These trade winds are as variable as are the interests affected by tariff schedules.

In the House of Representatives the members are slouching about, some discussing one schedule, some another, but the leaders on neither side showing any broad conception as to what a tariff bill should do or as to how it should be constructed. The only influences that seem to have been potent either with the committee that framed the bill or with the individual members are those of the particular interests of the states which these members represent. The truth is that they do not at all times betray intelligent conception of the interests of their own particular states.

This making of a tariff is a hard position in which to place a congressman. Those who are engaged in any particular line of industry and living within his state see in the making of a new tariff an opportunity to add to their personal profit by raising or lowering the duty, so they organize and make concerted attacks upon the congressmen from their particular locality. The effort is to make it appear that unless this or that particular industry shall be protected or shall be placed upon the free list, that the lowering of a schedule a half cent a pound or 4-100 of one cent per pound, spells "ruin" to that particular industry.

A twenty-five cent package of perfume or a twenty-five cent toilet article will cost forty cents.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

IV.—Creating a Demand For Goods

By Henry Herbert Huff

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

"Mr. Business Man, you spoke of your trouble in interesting patrons in new and quality merchandise."

"Yes; these show up more profit than 'staples,' but for some reason they do not sell readily."

"Here is your greatest opportunity to utilize good advertising. Study the mail order catalogues. You can get many ideas from them. Note the complete descriptions, the catchy headlines, the attractive cuts. This is a forceful example of the creative side of advertising. Good newspaper publicity has a double effect—(1) to take trade from less energetic competitors and give it to the one who advertises and (2) to make more business. If a well written ad. so presents the advantages of possessing a talking machine, for instance, that some one becomes interested and buys one, hasn't it made more business? If the buyer had not thus been convinced of his need for one, he might never have made such a purchase. That is just what advertising is doing for the retailer and general advertiser alike."

"And it will interest my patrons in good clothes?"

"Certainly. People dress so much better today than ever before, largely through the influence of advertising. Style depends very much upon it for existence. Practically all of our knowledge of fashion and what is newest and best in the world's markets comes to us through the newspaper and magazine ad. The public is interested and quite eager to read. Let the local merchant talk about such things in his ads., and he can make a demand for new and quality goods. Readers need first to be shown WHY they should possess any particular article, WHY they should dress better, WHY they should put in a furnace, WHY they should buy a kitchen cabinet. This study of 'selling points' will come later on. Take the matter of good clothes. One of those illustrations, such as are furnished to the trade by wholesale clothing makers, pictures the wearer with such a stylish, clean cut, well groomed appearance—enough to make any man want to dress better, particularly if helped along with clinching arguments. People need to be TOLD what they want and should have."

"And quality?"

"People need to be CONVINCED that the quality article is the most economical. Advertising carries your arguments to the buyer. Often merchandise is claimed to 'sell on sight.' This is rarely true. Most any article needs to have its good points presented before the reader acquires a desire for it."

"Every man in business is an egotist. He believes he can furnish his customers merchandise of better quality at less cost or in a more satisfactory way than anybody else. He has no reason to expect patronage except that he offers some greater inducement than do his competitors. He needs to tell the public WHAT he has to sell and WHY they should buy it of him."

try. There is no doubt that there are particular cases where slight changes in the tariff may work a great harm to a particular industry and also that great benefits may be conferred by other slight changes. There is not a man in Congress, be he Republican or Democrat, who would do anything to knowingly injure any great producing industry of this country.

The reason that there are so many differences is that the local interests of one section are opposed to the local interests of another. The man in Kansas believes that free hides would be detrimental to the farmers of that state and would ruin him politically, but he is in favor of free shoes. The man in Massachusetts knows that free shoes would ruin him politically but he is in favor of free hides. The lumbermen of Oregon and Washington are convinced that free lumber would ruin them politically while the Nebraska representatives are sure that if they don't vote for free lumber that they will be ruined politically.

It is all this, it is all politics, and the one important lesson to be gathered out of the mess is the need of some authoritative source of information that will make recommendations to Congress without regard to the particular interests of some special community, but having regard to the needs of the country as a whole.

There is one phase of tariff making in which everyone of the 85,000,000 consumers in the United States are interested. The average housewife depending upon a small weekly salary having a big family to support understands it better than the politician and the statesman. It is the question as to whether the tariff revision will make the cost of living more or less. The big question in the tariff controversy is: Will tariff revision bring down prices of commodities and make the cost of living less? The schedules in the Payne bill answer this in the negative. Treasury experts have officially declared that the average tax proposed in the Payne bill is 1.56 per cent higher than in the present Dingley law. At present, according to these official figures, the average tax is 44.16 percent, while the average in the Payne bill is 45.72 percent.

A twenty-five cent package of perfume or a twenty-five cent toilet article will cost forty cents.

A pound box of fancy toilet soap will cost from fifteen to twenty cents more.

Cocoa butter will be four cents a pound higher.

Chicory root will be 15 cents a lb. more.

Coffee will be from two to five cents a pound higher.

Spices of all kinds—pepper, cinnamon, allspice, ginger, paprika, etc. will be thirty per cent dearer.

Feathers will be ten per cent higher. A five dollar plume of breast for trimming a hat will cost fifty cents more.

Furs will be 15 per cent higher.

Dyes will be one-third more costly, adding to the price of all colored fabrics.

Small plate glass will cost two cents a square foot more than now, while large plate glass will be cheaper.

Ornamental pins will cost ten per cent more.

Expensive painting or works of art brought abroad by millionaires will be admitted free of duty, but post cards and lithographs of the class poor people frame for home decoration, will cost more.

Split peas will be five cents a bushel more.

Figs will have an added duty of a quarter of a cent a pound.

Pineapples will pay an added duty of $1 a thousand.

Mercerized cotton and other "near silk" fabrics generally used by people who can't afford to buy silk, will cost a cent a yard more.

Stockings will cost more.

Women's gloves will be from twenty-five to fifty cents a pair dearer.

And while Mr. Payne has not admitted it, there will be no reduction in the price of oil, coal, meat, flour, salt, sugar, furniture, woolen or cotton goods—the items which make up the great bulk of the weekly house-keeping bills.

In the two days of his rambling tariff talk, the only things which Mr. Payne claimed would be cheaper under the sort of tariff revision he wants were these:

Wire nails, one cent a pound.

Cut nails, 1 cent a pound.

Bolts and rivets, 1 cent a pound.

Iron ore.

Lumber (with a string on it).

Steel rails (also with a string).

Tacks, 1 cent a pound.

Files, twenty per cent.

Soft coal, about a dollar a ton cheaper in New England.

Hides and leather, but not shoes.

Wood pulp.

Newspaper of cheap grades, but not wrapping or writing paper.

Tea is to be higher, to give the government more revenue, but the beer tax is to be the same, and while the tariff on wheat is so manipulated as to enable the milling trust to control both the price the American farmer gets for his grain and the price the American consumer pays for his flour, there is to be a reduction of fifteen cents a bushel in the tariff on barley, so that the brewers can buy cheaper grain and malt from Canada.

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it is the most popular Unabridged dictionary edited in detail, and tastefully enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation.

We are of the opinion that this allegation may be true, and accordingly we have the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation, and is a valuable source of popular philological knowledge that any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

With all the advantages of youth, education and good looks and no vocation other than the enjoyment of wealth, the hero of our present story chose rather to sacrifice his ease and comfort on the altar of his duty as a citizen. His city called him to save her from spoliation and corruption, and he responded to the call. To lure him from the path of right came the seductions of love and the claims of a revered parent's memory, allied with the mighty forces at the command of political and financial malefactors. The firmness with which "the man of the hour," singled out for the highest post in a great municipality by those who saw in him only a weakling and a tool, resisted the very forces that had elevated him for their own purposes to official power will be an inspiration to the reader, as it has been an uplifting force in the minds of thousands who have witnessed its theatrical representation.

CHAPTER XI.

AT sound of the breaking fan all three participants in the strange reunion turned. For a second or more they faced the crimson-faced, dumfounded Perry without a word. Here was an element in the affair on which neither Phelan nor Cynthia had counted when giving Thompson their promise not to reveal his identity. They gradually realized this, and it left even the ready-witted Phelan speechless.

Perry himself was first to break the spell.

"Well," he observed, with an assumption of airy scorn that was meant to be annihilating, "you all seem quite happy. Don't mind me! I'm sorry to butt in on this cute little love fest, but I left a fiancee here. Perhaps one of you can explain what's happened to her since I—"

"Oh, Perry," exclaimed Cynthia, "don't be silly! I'll tell you all about it some time. It is—"

"Some time?" squealed Perry, rage flitting down his attempt at sarcasm. "Some time! Maybe it might be just as well if you did condescend to explain. Here you promise to marry me, and ten minutes later I find you in a catch-as-catch-can bug with this ugly little shrimp and Phelan looking on as happy as if he'd eaten a canary! And then you've got the gall to tell me you'll explain 'some time'!"

He glared at Cynthia in all the majesty of outraged devotion, only to surprise on that young lady's face a look that indicated a violent struggle with the desire to laugh.

"This is funny all right, I guess not?" he snapped. "Cynthia, you're mauled and smashed a loving heart, and I'll make a hit with myself by forgiving you, but as for you," wheeling about and thrusting his furious face to within three inches of Thompson's immobile countenance—"as for you, I'm going to do all sorts of things to you the moment Miss Garrison will have the kindness to shazzay out of the room. Your sorrowful relatives will have all manner of fun sorting you out when I've finished with you! Steal my sweetheart, would you, not ten minutes after I'd—"

"There!" interposed Phelan, shoving his powerful bulk good-naturedly between the two younger men and linking his arm in Perry's. "Now you've got quite a bunch of hot words off your chest, an' you'll be in better shape to bear sense. Ain't you just a little bit ashamed?"

"Ashamed?" sputtered Perry. "What? Well, that—"

"Yes, you youngster, and if you hold like that in company I'll sure be forced to wind up by spankin' you. Now, stand off there—no, over there where you can see Miss Garrison—an' listen to me. So! Now, first of all, did you happen to be in love with this young lady?"

"It's none of your measly business, but I did."

"Why'd you ask her to hitch up with you for keeps?"

"Because I loved her and—"

"Because you had a lot of faith in her, too, hey?" persisted the older man.

OF THE HOUR

"Pretty girl, too," mused Phelan as if to himself. "In my young days if I could 'a' got a little beauty like that to sign articles with me I'd 'a' thought I was the original Lucky Jim. I'd—"

"So did I!" interrupted Perry hotly.

"I—"

But Phelan was continuing in the same abstract monologue:

"An' if I could 'a' seen from her eyes (like any dog head could see from Miss Garrison's) that she had a heart as big as a watermelon an' as true as a Bible text an' as warm as a happy man's hearth fire—well, if I'd seen all that an' got wise to the gorgeous news that that same heart was just chock-a-block full of love for my own ornery, cheap-skate self I'd 'a' dropped down on both knees an' sent up a bunch of prayers to be allowed to go on dreamin' an' never, never wake up."

Perry paused. This time Perry did not break in, and the half audible monologue continued:

"I'd had the sense to know that a girl with eyes like those couldn't be a flirt an' couldn't double cross the man she loved if her life depended on her doin' it. I'd 'a' licked any guy that said she could, an' if I'd seen her kissin' another man I'd 'a' punched myself on the jaw an' called myself a Mar. That's what Jimmy Phelan of the Eighth would 'a' done. An'—"

"Say," broke in Perry in a curiously subdued voice. "These eyes of mine do funny things sometimes. I'll bet $9 they played a joke on me just now. And even if they didn't I don't believe 'em. Cynthia, I'm dead stuck on you! You're all right even if you did happen to be acting a trifle eccentric a few minutes ago. You can explain or not, as you like. If you'll just say you love me, that's ace high with yours truly."

He slipped an arm about her waist as he spoke, awkwardly seeking to atone for his recent anger. The secretary looked at them for an instant, then said briefly:

"You can tell him, Cynthia. He's a good fellow. Come on, alderman. I think you and I still have something to say to each other."

Cynthia and Perry drifted away toward the conservatory again, quite oblivious of the others, while Phelan and the secretary made their way to a deserted alcove off the ballroom.

"I've been looking all over for you, Mr. Bennett," called Judge Newman, hurrying out through the chain of anterooms as Alwyn wandered out of the ballroom into the foyer a few moments later.

"Anything important?" asked Bennett, pausing in his stroll and greeting the older man cordially. He had known the judge as long as he could remember and had always had a decided liking for the pompous bespeckled little dignitary. Surrounded as he was by political intrigue, heartache and association with rogues, the harassed young man rather welcomed the variety promised by a chat with his old friend of his boyhood.

"Anything important, Judge?" he repeated. "Or are you just taking pity on a lonely chap and giving him a chance to chat with you over old times?"

"Well," began the Judge, his customary air of pomposity nervousness tinged by an almost conciliatory manner, "I would like to have a little business talk with you if you don't mind discussing work at a ball."

"Not at all! I've had the honor of dancing with three of your daughters this evening, and the least I can do is to repay such pleasure by—"

"Did you, really?" beamed the judge, on whom the unmarried state of his four fast aging girls rested heavily. "I'm sure Mrs. Newman will be pleased. But this business matter. You—you won't misunderstand me—"

"Of course not," replied Alwyn heartily. "You and I are too old friends, Judge, to—"

"I hope so; I hope so," conceded Newman, with growing anxiety in his tone. "You see—"

"I see you have some trouble coming to the point," said Alwyn, pitying the judge's evident discomfiture. "and I'm sorry you feel so. You were my father's friend, and I like to think of you as one of my own best friends. There surely should be no hesitation in asking anything in my power to grant."

Thus emboldened Newman blurted out:

"I—we—that is, seems to me you have been a little hard upon this Borough franchise bill, if you don't mind my saying so, Bennett. Couldn't you let up on them now?"

"Why, no, Judge. I can't," replied Bennett, still failing to connect Newman with the Wainwright-Horrigan clique and attributing the judge's inflexion in the matter to—the hatchet and let us be friends again for the sake of old times. I thought Judge Newman's age and his high office would compel a certain respect even with a man of Bennett's character. But I was wrong, and I am sorry, Judge, for the unjust humiliation I caused you."

"I don't understand," said Dallas, looking in bewilderment from one to the other. "Judge, my uncle sent you to make overtures of peace? And Mr. Bennett refused to—"

"He not only refused, but called Mr. Wainwright a highwayman and—"

"But why?" demanded Dallas.

"He pretended to misunderstand what I said about the conditions."

"Oh, it was a conditional offer, then? I thought—"

"Certainly there were conditions," cut in Wainwright, again coming to the emissary's rescue. "I asked that he take a position of neutrality in regard to this Borough bill. Simply neutral, mind you. Not to change his attitude in its favor, or—"

"That was a splendidly fair offer," cried Gibbs enthusiastically.

"So it seemed to me," agreed Newman, "but Bennett would not listen when I tried to point out his proper line of duty. He called me a go-between and—"

"Even after you told him we were granting practically all the concessions he had asked in the bill?" queried Gibbs.

"Yes," said Newman. "He must have some motive behind it all. I can't—"

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Dallas. "What ulterior motive could he have?"

"That is more than I know positively," returned the Judge mysteriously.

"But I do," declared Wainwright, pointing at Dallas. "There are the reasons."

"IT" exclaimed Dallas, incredulous.

"Explain, please."

"Willingly," replied her uncle, "If you'll give me a fair hearing, Bennett is in love with you. He knows Gibbs also wishes to marry you. He knows, too, that Gibbs' fortune depends on the success of the Borough franchise. If the bill is beaten, Gibbs will be practically ruined and thus in no position to marry. We've known all along of this reason of Bennett's for fighting our bill, but Gibbs forbade me to tell you. He was afraid you might think he—"

"I don't believe one word of it!" cried Dallas, her big eyes ablaze. "Alwyn Bennett could not stoop to such a thing."

"No?" said Wainwright. "Then you probably will refuse to believe what I am about to tell you now. I considered Borough stock a safe investment, and I put all your money and Perry's in it. Bennett knows this, and in spite of the knowledge he is trying to kill the franchise even on the certainty of beggarizing you and Perry along with Gibbs. If only he can ruin Gibbs he cares nothing about making you and Perry paupers too. That is the sort of man you are defending against your own uncle. I have just learned, besides that he has secretly, through his brokers, sold large blocks of Borough stock short. Thus his veto that ruins us will make him a very rich man."

"It isn't true!" affirmed Dallas in dogged certainty. "Mr. Gibbs, do you confirm this story of my uncle's?"

"Please leave me out of this, Miss Wainwright," answered Gibbs gently.

"I prefer to say nothing to prejudice you. When I fight I fight fair."

"Even at the cost of all your money," amended Wainwright. "Gibbs, this is carrying your sense of honor to an absurd point. And Bennett will—"

"Pardon me," broke in Alwyn, entering the foyer and going up to Dallas.

"I'm a little late for our dance. I was detained by—"

"Alwyn!" exclaimed Dallas in relief.

"I'm so glad you came here just when you did. Now we can clear this up in a word."

"Clear what up?" queried Bennett, glancing about in suspicion at the three silent men.

"You know Mr. Gibbs is favored in the Borough Street railway affair," began Dallas. "He told you so at your office that day we were there. Well—"

"Yes, but don't let's discuss business tonight," replied Bennett. "This is our dance, and—"

"Wait, please. You knew his fortune was largely tied up in Borough stock, in time they shall know you!

For 20 years, I have done good work, and they call me;

"XL" LINDEGREN The Clothes Dealer

I'm invested in that stock and that if you defeat the bill we will be dependent on Sir Wainwright's charity. If that is true, you didn't know it, did you?"

Her voice was almost tremulous in its eager, confident appeal, but Bennett forced himself to answer:

"Yes; it is true, and I knew it."

The eager glow died from her eyes, leaving a look of dawning horror.

"And, knowing this—knowing Perry and I shall be made paupers by your action—you still insist on—"

"On opposing the bill? Yes. I am sorry, but it is my duty."

"Duty!" sneered Wainwright. "Your 'duty' was done when you vetoed the bill. That act made your position clear and showed the public how you regarded the measure, so why go on fighting it after—"

"I won't discuss this with you, Mr. Wainwright," interrupted Bennett. "We already understand one another, you and I."

"My uncle says," pursued Dallas, "that you made your broker secretly sell Borough stock short, knowing the deal would enrich you. Won't you even deny this?"

"No."

"You realize what all this foolish stubbornness must mean to me—to all of us," continued Dallas, "and you persist in your opposition?"

"I must," said Bennett. "I can't turn back. Oh, Dallas," he added dropping his voice till none but she could hear, "can't you trust me—only till Friday? I'll come to you on Saturday morning and tell you the whole miserable story. I only ask you to wait until then. Please—"

"I see no need of waiting for an explanation," retorted Dallas aloud. "I understand everything."

"But you don't understand!" insisted Alwyn.

"I understand only too well," repeated Dallas. Checking his reply and ignoring the anguished appeal in his eyes, she turned to Gibbs.

"I have kept you waiting long for your answer, Mr. Gibbs," she said speaking in a level, firm, emotionless voice. "I am prepared to give it to you now—publicly. You have often asked me if I would be your wife. My reply is 'Yes.'"

"Dallas!" gasped Bennett in horrified surprise.

Scared the Beast.

The extraordinary skill with which Sir Edwin Landseer painted animals was due not merely to his mastery of the brush, but also to his intimate knowledge of the animal world. One of his many talents was the power of imitating to perfection the cry of any creature with which he was familiar. One day when the artist happened to be the guest of Lord Ritters he was requested to go and see a very savage dog that was tied up in the yard. As Landseer approached the growling beast he dropped quietly upon his hands and knees and then, crawling forward, snarled so alarmingly that the dog, overcome with terror, suddenly snapped his chain, jumped over the wall and was never seen afterward.

Whiter Than a Shirt.

Inventors have a power of abstraction which serves them a good turn on some occasions and is liable to betray them into strange statements on others.

"So you think you've perfected your little machine at last, do you?" asked the lawyer of his dreamy eyed client.

"Yes; it's all right now. There's not a flaw in it," said the inventor. "But I can assure you, sir, that when it came to making the final test I was frightened. I happened to see my face in a mirror when the thing was safely over, and it was as white as your shirt, sir. In fact," he added, bending an impartial gaze on the lawyer's shirt front, "it was whiter—considerably whiter. I should say."

A Drifting Bottle.

Here is an unprecedented journey of a drifting bottle—from central Illinois to the Pacific ocean—a 10,000 miles voyage in four years. A clerk in a store at Bloomington on Jan. 27, 1900, wrote a letter which he inclosed in a bottle and threw into the Mackinaw river ten miles from town. Jesse Wilson of Santa Monica, Cal., found the bottle off the California coast and communicated with the writer of the letter. The bottle must have voyaged down the Mackinaw, the Illinois, the Mississippi and so into the gulf; thence the strange and conflicting currents carried it clear round the Horn and up the Pacific coast, a most remarkable voyage indeed.—New York Tribune.

A Delicate Dismissal.

"A certain theatrical manager," said an actor, "had to refuse many applications for free tickets, but his refusals are put delicately. They are as delicate as the young husband's dismissal of his wife's mother. This lady had been visiting at the man's house steadily for seven months. On toward Christmas time she said to him:

"John, I am going to have my photograph taken as a Christmas gift for you and Minnie. What dress do you prefer me in?"

"Your traveling gown, dear mother," the son-in-law replied.

Tim Knew the Law.

Tim was a protege of Mr. Blank, a well known lawyer. He was often in trouble, but by personal influence with the courts Mr. Blank managed to have him let down easy, so it became a matter of talk that he did not suffer greatly in being arrested.

"How is it, Tim," some one asked one day, "that you are arrested very often, but never go to jail or pay any fines?"

"It's just this way," Tim replied. "I have Mr. Blank for my lawyer, and what he doesn't know about the law I tell him."—Philadelphia Ledger.

MRS. ROSA BOYER.

MRS. ROSA BOYER, 121 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., writes: "If any one has reason to praise Peruna it is surely myself."

"Last spring I became so run down from the serious effects of a lingering cold, that several complications united in pulling me down. I could neither eat nor sleep well, and lost flesh and spirit.

"I finally tried Peruna and it did wonders for me. In two weeks I was like another person, and in a month I felt better than I ever had before."

"I thank Peruna for new life and strength. I send you two pictures, so you can see what Peruna has done for me."

Better Than for Years.

Mrs. Mary F. Jones, Burning Springs, Ky., writes:

"I wish to speak a word in praise of your highly valued Peruna, as I have been blessed with the golden opportunity of giving it a fair and impartial test, and can say that I have had better health, far better, since I have been using it than for quite a number of years before."

"One of my neighbors had stomach trouble. I recommended Peruna to her, and now she is well and healthy, after having been pronounced hopeless by several physicians."

Many people will be attracted to Wausau on April 27, when any one may enter certain lands in Northern Wisconsin belonging to the government. At ten o'clock on that day the land office will be open for applications for entry. This will be the most important event since the remarkable rush for water reserve lands on December 20, 1890, when hundreds of people not only from this state, but from neighboring states, were attracted to Wausau.

The strength of a child.

It is surprising to find how few parents know the great strength giving qualities of good oatmeal. Most of them think of it as a food for the sturdy Scotch or the brawny Englishman, and overlook its value as a food for children. Every now and then a mother will take to feeding her children on Quaker Oats and will be astonished at their improvement in strength and vigor. Of course, she tells her friends, and they prove it for themselves, but every mother in the country should see that her children are strong and vigorous. Plenty of Quaker Oats, eaten often, will do it.

Grocers sell Quaker Oats in regular size packages at 10c, the family size packages at 25c, and the family size package containing a piece of fine china for 30c.

Chas. Emden, who owns a large farm in the town of Pelican, is now located at Seattle, Wash., where he holds a position with the Northern Pacific railway company. He writes that the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition is now about entirely completed and ready for reception of visitors when the gates open on June 1. He further states that hotel and restaurant rates during the fair will be very high.

Chas. Stevens has a photograph of a monster load of pine logs containing over 12,000 feet. This load was put up at the camps of the Stevens Lumber Company near Parish last winter and was hauled by two horses five miles from the woods to the landing. Many loads of logs much larger than this one have been seen in the Northern Wisconsin lumber woods but they were mostly arranged for show purposes and were never hauled any distance.

ARRESTS MANITOWOC GIRL

Chief of Police Geo. Grossman of Manitowoc arrived in the city, this morning, to take charge of Rose Bokofsa, a young girl who was taken into custody, Tuesday afternoon, by Chief Straub. The chief received a description of the girl that day, from the Manitowoc authorities and arrested her in a house on the south side, a few hours later. She, with several other girls, is said to be implicated in wine room escapades at Manitowoc.

WOMEN CAN VOTE

On election day, next Tuesday, women will be given an opportunity to vote for state and county superintendents of schools. In the city of Rhinelander residents cannot vote for county superintendent but may vote for state superintendent. Elsewhere in the county both offices can be voted for. The law concerning the right of women to vote is as follows:

"Every woman who is a citizen of this state, of the age of twenty-one years or upwards (except paupers, persons otherwise excluded by section two of article three of the constitution of Wisconsin,) who has resided within the state one year, and in the election district where she offers to vote ten days next preceding any election pertaining to school matters shall have a right to vote at such election. FROM NEARBY TOWNS

Marquette—Information received by local officers shows that Jews in local kosher markets have been buying up and selling as meat, throughout the city, calves that are only a few days old.

Ashland—A new tug is being built at Bayfield for the Lake Superior towing company which has a contract to tow logs for the Stearns Lumber company the coming summer. The logs will be towed from the mouth of the Bad River to Washburn. The tug will be named "The City of Bayfield" will be over 100 feet long and one of the most up-to-date crafts on the lakes.

Antigo—The Congregational church has been found too small to accommodate the large congregation, and it has been decided to enlarge and remodel the building at a cost of $5000.

Merrill—A fund of $1000 is being raised to be placed in the hands of a committee appointed to try to get another railroad to enter this city. An enthusiastic meeting was held at the court house at which it was decided to go at this question in a business like manner. Data will be secured to prove that a competitive line would be a paying investment.

Ladysmith—The "drys" are agitating the no license question here and it looks as though the proposition is put up to the voters next Tuesday that "no license" will carry by a big majority. The saloons here have been conducted in a manner that has provoked considerable criticism from all sides and the people are about prepared to put them out of business.

Wausau—The party of lumbermen and manufacturers who have been in the south for the last two weeks returned Thursday and report a pleasant and profitable trip. W. H. Bissell gave the party a donkey ride at his company's lumber camps and gave them a feast of southern products, besides presenting each member with the mule he rode. The trip which covered five southern states, was made in a private car.

Ashland—William G. French has prepared a petition to the legislature asking for $500,000 for alleged false imprisonment, and for having been a victim of conspiracy in the Ashland county jail, the Waupun state prison, the Oshkosh Insane asylum, the Iowa county insane asylum and the Richland Center insane asylum. French killed his brother-in-law, Gavin M. Steele in 1891.

Medford—While helping her husband load logs, Mrs. Walter House of Greenwood, was instantly killed by a log falling back and crushing her chest.

Prentice—Justice Larkin sentenced M. J. Ring to pay a fine of $25, and six days in jail for selling liquor to a minor. Ring served one day of the sentence and was released on a writ of habeas corpus it being shown that the Justice had no jurisdiction in the case.

Tomahawk—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company may not build a new depot but instead will remodel the present building. The company will also make other improvements about its property here.

Antigo—Sheriff Jones seized eight slot machines at the village of Philox and the owners were arrested and pleaded guilty to operating gambling devices. The machines furnished fuel for a monster bon fire in the court house yard.

Antigo—Judge W. F. White has rendered a decision in the case against the waterworks company in favor of the city. The case was for the recovery of the company's personal tax amounting to $314.2.

Frederick—It is believed here that the Soo line will build a branch from Frederick to Gordon. This will give it a new entry into Superior.

Best Treatment For Colds.

"Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderate laxatives, hot foot baths, a free perspiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment." While this treatment is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is almost sure to be contracted, and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? For sale by F. L. DISTRESS FROM UPSET STOMACH

Also Misery from Indigestion Vanishes Five Minutes Later

Take your sour stomach—or may be you call it Indigestion. Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Cataract of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triagule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice, your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is tickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

BANNER LOAD OF LOGS

O. A. Kolden received Tuesday from his brother at Black Duck, Minn., a photograph of what is said to have been the largest load of logs ever hauled on sledges by horses. The load contained 50,550 feet; 250 tons or 9 carloads. It was hauled fifteen miles by three teams at J. A. Irvine & Company's camp for the Thief River Falls Lumber Company, Pine Island, Beltrami county, Minn., on March 4, 1909. The logs are held by tall stakes on each side of the sledges.

RHEUMATISM

More than nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The free application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed, and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it removes the pain and soreness. The medicines usually given internally for rheumatism are poisonous or very strong medicines. They are worse than useless in cases of chronic and muscular rheumatism. For sale by F. L. Hinman & Co.

FATHER IS FIFTH TO DIE

Five Years Death and Change in Tripoli Family

Matt Macki, a resident of Tripoli, died Friday morning at St. Mary's hospital. For some time he had been ill with dropsy. Friends from Tripoli arrived in the city, Monday evening, and returned with the body the following morning, to that village where interment took place. Mr. Macki was fifty-one years of age.

He is the fifth death in the family within five years. During that time his wife and three children have passed away and the only surviving member of the family is a daughter who lives at Tripoli.

MARTINEAU ENGAGES COUNSEL
From the Merrill News it is learned that Frank Martineau, the prisoner at Waupun, who was mentioned in The New North, several weeks ago, as attempting to secure a pardon, has secured the services of the Grand Rapids law firm of Goggins, Brazeau & Heire, as his counsel to gather facts and evidence in the matter to present to the governor asking for his release. Martineau was sentenced from Lincoln county in 1880 for killing a resident of the town of Harrison. He has made claims against the officials at the time of his arrest, owing to the fact that he was unable to understand the English language. He is serving a life sentence in the state prison.

A Hiding Place For Money.

According to an insurance agent whose round is in a sparsely locality of a large city, money is frequently kept in Bibles by poor people. A laundress blessed with an intemperate husband showed the collector her little treasury, which she kept between the leather of the back of a colossal volume. Access was gained to this savings bank by means of a slit cut near the edge of the cover, the coins resting safely between the board and its outer covering. She declared that this secret place had contained the hidden wealth of mother, grandmother and great-grandmother and that her eldest daughter was to possess the Bible and share the mystery as soon as she married.—New York Mail.

A Hedge of Roses.

It is not generally known what a delightful feature a rose hedge may become, even in the villa garden, or such would more often be planted in lieu of the ubiquitous privet. Where the area of the garden is limited or where only a moderately high hedge is desired for enclosing the rose garden or bordering a tennis lawn a selection should be made from the China or monthly roses, the Japanese or rugosa roses and the Austria briars. If the garden is very sheltered some of the stronger growing of the dwarf teas could be utilized, and from the free flowering polyantha group delightful little hedges can be made that would grow to a hedge of three or four feet.—Gardener.

John Cheerfully Agreed.

A lad who was visiting at a relative's house was unused to the form of saying grace before meals. He began to eat without waiting or watching to see what the rest did.

"John," ventured his uncle hesitatingly, "weee usually say a little something before we eat."

"Say all you want, say all you want. You can't turn my stomach!"—Exchange.

He Was Just Careful.

"I can't understand why my second husband is so fastidious. He scarcely eats anything. My first husband, who died, used to eat everything I cooked for him."

"Have you told your present husband that?"

"Yes."

"Perhaps that's the reason!"—Megendorfer Blatter.

Notice of Election.

To the Electors of the City of Rhinelander:

Notice is hereby given, that a Judicial and City election is to be held in the several wards and election precincts in the City of Rhinelander, on the 6th day of April, 1909, at which the officers named below are to be chosen. The names of the candidates for the office to be voted for, whose nominations have been certified to this office, are given opposite the title of the office and under the appropriate party or other designation, each in its proper column.

INFORMATION TO VOTERS

The following instructions are given for the information and guidance of voters: A voter upon entering the polling place and giving his name and residence, will receive a ballot from the ballot clerk which must have endorsed thereon the name or initials of both ballot clerks, and no other ballot can be used. Upon receiving his ballot, the voter must retire alone to a booth or compartment and prepare the same for voting. A ballot clerk may inform the voter as to the proper manner of marking a ballot, but he must not advise or indicate in any manner whom to vote for. The voter should make a crossmark under the name of the candidate he desires to vote for or at any place within the space in which the name is printed. If he wishes to vote for a person whose name is not on the ballot, he must write the name in the blank space under the printed name of the candidate for the office. The ballot should not be marked in any other manner. If the ballot be spoiled it must be returned to the ballot clerk, who must issue another in its stead, but not more than three in all to any one voter. Five minutes time is allowed in booth to mark ballot. Unofficial ballots or memorandum to assist the voter in marking his ballot can be taken into the booth, and may be used to copy from. The ballot must not be shown so that any person can see how it has been marked by the voter. After it is marked it should be folded so that the inside cannot be seen, but so that the printed endorsements and signatures of the ballot clerks on the outside may be seen. Then the voter should pass out of the booth or compartment, give his name to the inspector in charge of the ballot box, hand him his ballot to be placed in the box, and pass out of the voting place. A voter who declares to the presiding officer that he is unable to read, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot can have assistance of one or two election officers in marking the same, to be chosen by the voter; and if he declares that he is totally blind, he may be assisted by any person chosen by him from among the legal voters of the county. The presiding officer may administer an oath in his discretion, as to such person's disability. The designations and candidates for the offices are as follows:

GUST SWEDBERG, City Clerk.

An Effective Disguise.

A playwright in New York criticised with telling scorn a drama that he had recently seen.

"The leading incident was so impossible," said he, "that I was reminded of one of those nonsense dialogues. You know how they run."

"A young man, for instance, says to a friend:

"For all her coldness and austerity I have kissed Ethel Prumm."

"Really?" doubts the other.

"Yes, really."

"But how on earth did you inflame that icy heart?"

"I didn't inflame her icy heart. That would have been impossible. I simply disguised myself as the blarney stone."—Philadelphia Record.

Different Wants.

"What we want is an administration that is fearless and energetic," said the patriot, "an administration that is unembarrassed by compromising friendships and unprejudiced by personal animosities."

"Nonsense!" interrupted the practical politician. "What I want is an administration that can be relied on to give me a job."—Kansas City, Independent.

Whistler's Wit.

Mr. Walter Sickert and Whistler were once printing etchings together when the former dropped a copper-plate.

"How like you!" said Whistler.

Five minutes afterward the improbable happened. Whistler, who was never clumsy, dropped one himself.

There was a pause.

"How unlike me!" was his remark.—Fortnightly Review.

To Hore Iron.

The following method is said to be effective when one has not the proper tools for making a hole in an iron plate: Shape a stick of sulphur to the required dimensions of the hole, then heat the iron white hot at the place where it is to be bored and press the sulphur against it. Sulphur of iron is formed, and the stick passes through the metal.
